21st Century Cures Act in Pediatrics: Presentation 6:30 pm – 7:30 pm Andy Spooner, MD, FAAP

Objectives:

- State the provider's basic obligation with respect to electronic health record release under the 21st Century Cures Act
- Cite at least two conditions under which an adolescent can consent to their own care under Ohio law, and explain why that is important
- Describe how an understanding of the various ways that health information can be exposed to patients and families is essential to privacy
- Articulate the importance of establishing a priori agreements about confidential care

Description:

Adolescents' ability to access confidential healthcare is vital for their health and wellbeing. Concerns about confidentiality may lead adolescents to avoid seeking necessary medical care or create communication barriers between patient and provider. In this session we will learn more about healthcare providers' basic obligations with respect to electronic health record release under the 21st Century Cures Act and how this impacts providing confidential care to adolescents.
